

This test included eighty individual words from five weekly Lists compiled from Alif Baa and all active vocabulary of Al Kitaab Units 1 and 2. The right column is the correct Arabic, and the left column what the student typed, prompted by an image. There was no ability to go back and correct. To advance to the next word the current answer had to be recorded, and could not subsequently be changed. Fifty of eighty students touch typed this Quiz. Most of the rest typed on the physical keyboard with the onscreen keyboard up for reference. They will soon not need it.

Eight students scored below 70%.

Grading was strict. A single letter misspelling or a missing or misplaced hamza was a .65% deduction. Many errors were essentially typing mistakes, such as م for ك, which are adjacent on the Mac keyboard, or ح for ج, or غ for ع, and so forth, mistaking the dot. Most often one of a pair of words was entered correctly, and the other not. Nevertheless a deduction was made. Interestingly, this elicited no complaints.

No extra credit is included in these scores.

The eyeVocab method has to be learned. The sixty one students who did, or 75% of all students, scored above 95%. The average score of those students was 98.56%.

This marks declarative long term vocabulary retention with minimal review.
